Diana Krall

Born in Nanaimo, British Columbia, singer/pianist Diana Krall's musical education began mostly from her father, who was a stride piano player with an extensive record collection. "I think Dad has every recording Fats Waller ever made," she said, "and I tried to learn them all."

With the release of 1999's When I Look in Your Eyes, whatever renown she had earned over the years for her work exploded, and the album became an international best-seller and earned her a Grammy for Best Jazz Vocal Performance. It also was the first jazz album to be nominated for Album of the Year in 25 years.

To date, her songs have cropped up everywhere, from episodes of Sex in the City to films like Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil. In 2001 she released The Look of Love featuring charts by legendary arranger Claus Ogerman, best known for working with bossa nova innovator Antonio Carlos Jobim in the '60s. The album topped the Billboard charts and went quintuple platinum in Canada, the first by a Canadian jazz artist to do so. The Look of Love also helped Krall win three Junos in 2002. In 2003, Krall married iconic British rock musician Elvis Costello, who then co-wrote and co-produced her next album, The Girl in the Other Room. Returning to the large ensemble standards approach of her previous album, Krall released From This Moment On in 2006. In 2009, she teamed once again with The Look of Love arranger Ogerman for the bossa nova-themed Quiet Nights.
